2020 January's Acting President's Message

Happy 'bloomin' New Year!

Lo...the cold, dreary, short days of winter are upon us brightened only by our orchids that are in bloom. In general, those winter blooming orchids are Brassavola, Cymbidium, Dendrobium, Encyclia, Ludisia, Odontoglossom, Oncidium, and Paphiopedilum. Of course, there are the "odd balls" that don't know any better and bloom anyway or, stubbornly, don't bloom at all! We anxiously await those that are now energizing, watching for "spikes", hoping they will be ablaze in time for display in our March MOS show. We learn patience and we are not disappointed.

Speaking of March, our annual show and sale is coming up March 3-8. Please keep this in mind; we can use your help beginning on March 3. More information will follow in February's Newsletter.

Thank you to Barbara and Lou Buck for putting together such a scrumptious Christmas party and to all those members who contributed goodies. No one should have gone home hungry.

Congratulations to our 2019 award winners...Service Awards to Frank Dagostin (posthumously), Sarah Hurdel, Tom McBride, Bob Travers and the Leadership Award to Valerie Lowe. The President's Choice Orchid Digest Award of Excellence was presented to Clark Riley.

The Rawlings Conservatory display is coming up. We will be placing plants on display on Friday, January 17 at 10 AM. Please bring your plants at that time and help set up. We can also accept your plants at the meeting the night before. Please leave an inventory of the plants you will be displaying with Sarah Spence or email to slspence@live.com. The display opens on Friday, January 17 at noon to 4PM and runs through Saturday and Sunday, January 18 and 19 from 10 AM till 4 PM. Plants can be picked up on Monday January 20. I will have a sign-up sheet at the meeting on the 16th. Please consider volunteering some time to "man/women" the station, so to speak.

Our next Board meeting is scheduled for January 23, at the home of John Heinbokel. Committee chairs...please get your reports to me by Tuesday, Jan. 21. If there are topics that you would like to place on the agenda, please email them to me (slspence@live.com). I wish all of you a Happy New Year and lots of orchid blooms to warm our hearts and homes. Learn about this often misunderstood, yet surprisingly easy to grow Genus. This presentation provides an introduction to the species, hybrids and closely related genera, with a detailed look at cultural needs and what makes this the ultimate showy orchid for growers without a greenhouse!

Sarah Hurdel is a grower, exhibitor, AOS Judge and active member of several local societies. MOS members are certainly aware and appreciative of her expertise and willingness to advise and assist less experienced growers. She currently maintains a collection of over 600 orchids under lights and has received AOS award recognition for culture, flower quality, and exhibit design. We anticipate that she will be bringing a selection of plants from her collection for sale at this meeting.

Happy New Year!

We are so glad you are here with us again for another year of orchid growing. With many of the traditional end of the year celebrations behind us, we can focus on the future. If you have not already done so, it is time to update your 1) affiliate information. There is an online option or 2) PDF print option on the Affiliated Societies website page to help you complete your updates.

This information is important if you want prospective members to find you. The details you provide about your meeting times, days and contact information are found on the AOS website Affiliated Societies lookup page. This contact information also appears in the print version of the Orchid Source Directory. In the ever-evolving leadership of today's orchid societies, it is important to update the AOS with your changes. <http://www.aos.org/About-Us/Affiliated-Societies/affiliated-societies-lookup.aspx>

This year brings a change in membership rates. With all of the existing benefits of membership plus the new awards program, OrchidPro, it remains an excellent value. Please be sure to discard any outdated AOS promotional material. Encourage your members to enroll online at JOIN - https://bit.ly/fb-join-aos Please note your Society Affiliation in the comments section at checkout.

Look for updated membership rates and membership material on the AOS website in 2020

January: The Month of Vision Looking Ahead to a New Year of Success
By Thomas Miranda

Can you believe it is already January again? All of us are yet another year older and wiser. I like to believe that, just like that old ad campaign, “We’re not getting older, we’re getting better,” but my morning mirror disproves that on a daily basis. Nonetheless, there is something to be said for aging. We do get better at some things with experience, and orchid growing is certainly one of those things. You may not realize it, but just from reading this magazine regularly, you gain significantly. Even if you cannot invest in state-of-the art greenhouses or the latest innovations, your awareness about the needs of orchids, gleaned from Orchids, has influenced you and improved your growing skills. Although it is fairly arbitrary, I find it is always at this time of year we attempt to reflect and take stock of our collections, our growing skill and our knowledge. We all share the goal of aspiring to grow our plants even better in the coming year. This, of course, requires “vision.” Aside from actually seeing the beauty of our orchids, if you look up vision in a dictionary or thesaurus, you’ll find some startling definitions and synonyms. Words such as “idea,” “dream” and even “revelation” appear there. So I challenge you in 2013 to think big, to shoot for the stars. Come up with a vision for yourself as an orchid person for the coming year, for five years, or even for where you’ll be in 10 or 20 years, and develop a strategy for reaching those goals.

Aside from your growing skills, think about how your enthusiasm for our beloved plants can best further the cause of other aspects of orchidology, such as conservation, education, technology and innovative cultivation techniques. Leave a legacy for those following in your footsteps. After all, wouldn’t it be sad to not pass on all you’ve learned to others? We have all been gifted with the joy of orchids. Let’s all spread that joy around the world this year.

I SEE YOU January is an exciting time in our collections. So many plants are in spike now and the anticipation of fattening buds’ imminent opening and first blooms of many newly acquired species and hybrids can make each day a revelation in the coming months. Look around your collection carefully for inflorescences that may be hiding from your view or, if your benches are packed like mine, may be caught hiding amidst lush foliage. Make sure your developing spikes are growing unobstructed and receiving adequate light so that they may display their natural grace upon blooming.

MAKE A GOOD IMPRESSION it is imperative to support developing spikes of many orchids, particularly phalaenopsis, cymbidiums and oncidium intergeneric hybrids. In the wild, epiphytic orchids tend to have pendent or cascading inflorescences, but unless your plants are mounted or in hanging baskets, this does not work well for most cultivated plants. In particular, spikes of hybrids that bear larger flowers or higher flower count than the species may be especially heavy and stressed by the time they are fully open. This also makes for the best presentation of your plants for the upcoming flower show season. Good presentation is the first step toward winning blue ribbons and AOS awards.

MOISTURE MATTERS the old adage “sometimes less is more” is true with orchids this time of year. With the shorter day lengths, cooler temperatures and generally overcast conditions so prevalent in winter, most orchids require far less water than they did in the summer growing season. Commonly grown genera such as Cattleya, Phalaenopsis and Paphiopedilum have matured their summer growth, and should be watered less frequently now. Some genera, especially Catasetum, Galeandra, Habenaria, Dendrobium and Lycaste, are truly “sleeping” now and can actually rot if watered excessively, or, in some cases, even just a little. You must determine which plants will suffer with even an occasional watering in winter, and segregate them to an area where they will not be hit with a stray, inadvertent pass of the watering wand. Despite the need for dryness, most orchids still do best in humid conditions. This becomes an important issue for those who grow in the home where humidity can be excessively low when radiators come on. Especially for the home grower, it is important to supplement humidity in winter with a humidifier, pebble tray or occasional misting. (As pertinent now, as it was then - Reprinted with permission ORCHIDS VOL. 82 NO. 1 JANUARY 2013) Also visit the AOS website for a Monthly Checklist on Orchid Care <http://www.aos.org/orchids/seasonal-orchid-care/january-february-checklist.aspx>

Worth the Read - ORCHIDS January Preview

For the Novice - Selecting New Plants As a new orchid grower, who hasn’t been stumped by trying to find a plant that will grow and thrive for you? The January article by Sue Bottom will give you pointers on things to look for to help you successfully grow a new acquisition.

This article presents a general overview of basic orchid selection by defining the difference between species and hybrids, seedlings and mericlones, diploids and tetraploids, and describes why you might choose one over the other. It explains the importance of plant tags and how they relate to the history of your new orchid. The educated grower will become a successful grower.

Coupled with archived information from the AOS Forum 1) Beginners' Newsletters and these tips from the AOS video library on 2) Selecting an Orchid and this 3) Members Only Webinar, you have enough to get you started on building a healthy orchid collection.
